

LYNETTE SILVERSTONE is a modern-day fairy tale character trapped in a dungeon, in need of a prince to rescue her. This prison is of her own making-- she's a hoarder living in the basement of an abandoned mannequin factory, surviving on rainwater and whatever scraps of rat king she can pull apart. LANCE BARRETT is the best damn garbage man in all of North County. No one is surprised when the governor himself asks Lance to take his talents to South County, the home of a trash-filled possibly haunted mannequin factory that the local garbage men dare not enter. Lance was expecting a whole lot of litter, and maybe a ghost or two-- he had no idea that true love was waiting for him behind a stack of urine-soaked magazines. Trash is all Lynette knows-- can she love a man whose mission is to take it all away? Can Lance throw away his hatred of garbage for a woman who lived amongst it for so long?! Or will their emotions be dragged to the curb?! Find out in the story of a passion that burns hotter than an incinerator!
